KANSEI DESIGN LAB.

The Master's program has three domains: Kansei Science, Behavioral Science, and Neuroscience.

The Graduate School of Comprehensive Human Sciences promotes international academic exchange with the goal of raising its academic level, enriching the content of its curricula, and fostering well-rounded students with an international perspective.

The Department of Kansei, Behavioral, and Brain Sciences is focused on cross-disciplinary education and research on higher brain function in humans, referred to as kansei. By establishing such an educational system, the university aims to train students who will comprehensively understand various human behaviors related to kansei on an individual level.

While studying Kansei Science, students will study related disciplines, such as cognitive science, brain science, robotics and instrumentation engineering, design, psychology, ergonomics and interaction.
